BY ONE RUN.

SACRAMENTO'S CRIPPLED NINE PLAYS WELL, BUT IS DEFEATED.

It was a splendid exhibition of the National Game—Some of the Features.

Yesterday's game in this city was one of the finest exhibitions of ball playing that has ever been seen here. To the spectators, however, there was a redeeming feature lacking, namely, the fact that the Sacramento could not win it. The San Francisco were victorious and deserved to win, although the same could be said of the Sacramento, had the result been the other way. It is getting to be a sort of "chestnut" to still shout "hard luck" when the home nine is beaten, and to give the cause of the Sacramento's defeat yesterday, it must be acknowledged that the San Francisco were too much for their opponents. They batted harder and could say with as much propriety as the Sacramento that it was hard luck on their part that they did not win the game by a greater margin than one point. The score was 3 to 2, which is the best of evidence that the game must have been close and exciting throughout. The Sacramento played a stronger game than it was generally supposed to play without either Bowman or Stapleton in their ranks. Ever since the latter members had played, the fielding could not have been improved upon, but it is quite reasonable to suppose that the base hit column would have been swelled, and this was the only reason the Sacramento did not win the contest. A very seldom club making two hits in nine innings is victorious, and the rule was not expected yesterday. Young and Speer are a magnificent pair, the former having pitched a remarkably steady game throughout. His curves are very deceptive, and it is very doubtful if Boston could have run for speed. He has perfect control of the ball, and in Speer he has a backstop in whom a great deal of confidence can be placed. McAlle and Goodenough were the only ones who could hit the ball safely on the part of the Sacramento, and the singles of both were scratches. The rest of the nine could do nothing with Young's delivery, and had to content themselves in knocking away chances to the infielders or striking out.

Harper did not pitch with much effectiveness at first, and after four hits was made off him in the second inning. It was thought that towards the close of the game there would be but a few spots on the field that the ball did not touch. After this inning, however, and until the ninth, he did not allow a run to be made. He seemed to use more speed and control than even Sweeney, who is regarded as the best pitcher in the San Francisco nine, struck out three times. The work of both pitchers was so effective and the fielding of both was so exact and neat, that after two innings he had played the score, which was then 2 to 2, remained until the last half of the last inning. Then it was that after two San Francisco men had been struck out by Harper, Hanley drove into left field a two-bagger, which allowed Young, who was about to withdraw on second base, to score. The rest of the game was a struggle, and in the majority of instances the batters were retired in one, two and three order. Nobody making more than two, excepting Daly, Sweeney and Ehrhart, and these were of little consequence.

McAlle's catching could not have been improved upon, and it is not very often that a catcher has a score of points opposite his name, as has the clever Sacramento boy. Twelve chances were given him and he never missed an opportunity. "Pop" Hewitt could not hit a ball better than McAlle yesterday. One of his catches of a ball pitched deserved and received prolonged applause. He caught the ball and it came sailing back about a foot above the ground and to the left of the catcher. He dropped over on his left side and just did succeed in placing the ball in the glove of the left hand between the ball and ground. The other hand came to the assistance of the left, and the ball was caught. The effort was deserving of success.

Reitz and McAlle and Godar made a triple play in the second inning. It counted only as a double, however, as one man was out before the play was made. Sweeney hit a sky ball, which was made, on the third, made a dash for home. Reitz was three hits out at the bat, and McAlle was forward the ball to Godar in time for the latter to touch out Young, who was running from second on a wild pitch.

Goodenough made another of his wonderful catches yesterday. Lefty hit a high fly into right field, and McAlle thought the ball would land on the outside of the park. Goodenough ran for it and caught the sphere about a foot from the fence. In response to prolonged applause he doffed his cap.

Donohue umpired well, but the audience were against him, and when he appeared on the grounds there was considerable hissing. It might be a good plan to eject him from the grounds, and to have noisy spectators who hang on the fence in front of the grand stand and pass insulting and uncalled-for remarks, and to tip in the first inning struck the umpire in the eye with the mask, and the ball struck there. No damage was done.

OAKLAND DOWNED.

Borcher was Too Much for Colonel Robinson's Men.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 20th.—The Oakland and Stockton played a fine game today, the errors being few and sharp fielding plentiful. The Stocktons batted Meegan freely, and kept the outfielders busy. Borcher had a "picnic" with the Colonels, and McDonald and O'Neill were the only ones who could hit him safely more than once. Captain Norris O'Neill is on the sick list, and Billy Farrell played at third.

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA LEAGUE.

WOODLAND, April 20th.—The second game of baseball played here by the Northern California League was one of the best games ever witnessed by a Woodland audience. The batteries were Hinks, Tufts and Angle, Lavensons, Buckley and Doherty. The score was 6 to 3, in favor of the Hinks.

The game was an excellent exhibition of ball-playing, and the large crowd in attendance were well pleased with the contest. The Sacramento boys lay their defeat to the umpire, who, they claim, is not well versed in the rules of the game, and whose judgment is worse than that of the Lavensons, played a brilliant second base, as did Doherty behind the bat.

EAGAN'S CLOSE CALL.

A Steamboat Fireman Comes in Contact with Freight Cars.

About 4 o'clock yesterday morning, as officers Wagner and Frazer had just reached the police station with a prisoner, a railroad employee arrived and informed the officers that a man lay over on the old wharf, near the steamboat landing, and seemed to be suffering from injuries received in some manner. The officers named, accompanied by officer Higgins, went to the wharf, and found a man lying on the ground, and the side of the raised freight platform on the river bank, at the corner of J street. He was insensible, but groaning as if in great pain.

The officers picked him up and carried him to the Receiving Hospital, where it was found that he had been terribly injured by some freight cars which had a short time before been upon the track. The man, whose name was Eagan, was badly hurt, his right arm broken above the elbow, and his left foot had been run over by one of the freight cars, and severely crushed. The wheel had passed diagonally over the heel, missing the ankle and leg, and the limb was broken in two places. Some of the shoe was partially protected the foot, although the injury to it is likely to prove to be worse than it appears, which is a bad sign. The man was taken to the hospital, and the doctors are doing all they can for him.

Physician C. B. Nichols was called, and he dressed the man's wounds. Some hours later he recovered sufficiently to partake of some broth, which, however, did not stay on his stomach, and he complained of severe pains in the abdominal region.

When seen by a Record-Union reporter in the afternoon he was resting tolerably easy. He said his name was Charles Eagan, and that he was a fireman on the steamer J. D. Knight, running between here and Marysville. He had been upon that steamer, and the last he remembered was going toward the landing to get aboard the steamer. He said he was alone, so far as he knows, but thinks somebody had come from the wharf, and that he claims not to have seen.
